Stone's throw. Even though families live close to schools doesn't mean children can attend

LEAH GERMAIN

Living a stone's throw away from one of the city's newest schools doesn't mean Edmonton father Trevor Jank will be walking his son to kindergarten there this September.

Jank is just one of thousands of parents who had their neighbourhood school boundaries changed Tuesday as part of an Edmonton Public School board effort to address overcrowding.

"I could probably throw a rock from my driveway and hit the school," Jank said about Esther Starkman, the K-9 school a three-minute walk from his house.

"And yet I have to put my four-year-old on a bus to go 60 minutes to school."

Following the public school board's decision, all children living in Terwillegar South will no longer be eligible to attend Starkman - built in 2010 - but will have to travel upwards of a 60-minute bus ride to Lansdowne School.

Living just two houses down from the zone separating Esther Starkman designation with Lansdowne designation, Jank said the decision is disturbing.

"I think I owe it to my son to have him go to Esther Starkman, but the reality is he will have to go to this Lansdowne School," he added.

According to EPSB's district managing director Lorne Parker, using a walking radius approach to determine school boundaries wasn't a viable option for the city.

"That process has been tried and doesn't really work that effectively," Parker explained, adding the school board uses a natural boundary to clearly define a school's

"When you use a radius approach, you solve maybe one issue where you would capture a bunch of houses that would be closer to the school in a radius, but you are also cutting off streets and backyards."

Parker added that the school district was aware some parents would be unhappy with their latest decision, but due to the city's massive population growth, tough decisions had to be

Ukrainians in Edmonton worry over Kyiv violence

'I wish I could do something.' Many locals concerned about relatives, cautiously optimistic about truce

STEPHANIE DUBOIS

Glued to the television and social media, Edmontonian Natalia Niklevich has been worried for the safety of her family living in Ukraine during ongoing political protests.

Niklevich — who immigrated to Edmonton from Ukraine 22 years ago — has been in constant contact with a cousin who escaped the Kyiv protests and found safety in Lviv, which is about six hours from the capital city.

"I wish I could do something. I just want people to know what happened," Niklevich said. "It seems to me Western people don't really know what's going on.'

News of a truce brought some hope to Canadians after at least 25 people were killed and more than 200 people were injured Tuesday night during violent demonstra-

Finances, funding. Art Gallery aims to do 'a

The Art Gallery of Alberta has a three-year lifeline as it tries to get on stronger financial footing, but city councillors want the institution to do more to help itself.

The gallery will get $350,000 from the Edmonton Arts Council this year, $300,000 in 2015 and $250,000 in 2016. The arts council receives most of its funding from the city and these funds will come on top of the $1.125 million the city gives the gallery every year.

Since it opened, the gallery has struggled to hit targets from corporate sponsorships and other revenues, forcing it to rely on government grants.

Board chair Barry Zalmanowitz told councillors they are constantly trying to improve all aspects of the operation to bring in more revenue.

"We can do everything a little better than we are doing it now," he said, adding the gallery's goal is to develop plans so it no longer needs the money from the arts council when it runs out in three years.

Coun. Mike Nickel questioned why the city and the gallery weren't moving more quickly to resolve the issue. Should there not be a greater sense of urgency to get these issues addressed?"

Coun. Ben Henderson said reducing the programming would be disappointing, because the gallery was built as a major institution.

'That would be very far away from why we built the building in the first place," he said. RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

July event. Spartan Race still looking for a location in Edmonton

Runners in the popular Spartan Race typically have to tackle big obstacles, but event officials are coming up against their own roadblocks in finding a suitable Edmonton location.

The five-kilometre race which attracted 5,600 runners last year scheduled for July 5 and 6, but organizers still need a location to host the event that's expected to draw in about 15,000 racers and spectators.

"We're having difficulty and we really want to be in Edmonton. The people seem to be behind it but we're not getting the support we'd like to see from the city," said Dean Stanton, regional director for Western Canada, adding possible locations are still being discussed within Edmonton.

City officials say they requested Špartan have Race organizers submit a full proposal, which needs to outline issues like parking and environmental im-

An increase in counterfeit money has been circulating around Edmonton businesses, according to police, who are warning merchants to check serial numbers on $50 US bills.

Promotion of shared bike lanes planned for Glenora

Paving the way. City has plans to improve bike signage

Residents in Glenora got a first-hand look Wednesday at the plans for a neighbourhood facelift, including tying the neighbourhood into the city's cycling network with new bike lanes.

The plans — presented at a pubic meeting — showed the city's design options to identify shared bike lanes in the central community.

"A lot of these routes connect to adjoining neighbourhoods and that allows us to build neighbourhood bike lanes," said Tyler Golly, general supervisor of sustainable transportation with the city.

Plans for marked shared bike lanes on 104 Avenue from 136 Street to 142 Street are also in the city's plan to further connect cyclists

Many of the bike lanes are already established but city officials say the current blue signs will be replaced with green ones to help with way finding but that payment markings and "shared use" signage will also be added to the neighbourhood once completed.

"These are on quiet roads where people are biking on now," said Golly, adding the improved lanes are low impact ones and do not affect existing parking spaces.

Connections into Canora and North Glenora neighbourhoods are just some of the areas the improved cycling connectors will help build once completed within the next three years scheduled for the Glenora neighbourhood project.

Neighbourhood reconstruction is part of the city's Building Great Neighbourhoods initiative. It includes resurfacing of roadways, streetlight upgrades, and reconstruction of sidewalks, curbs and gutters. Reconstruction is partially funded by the 1.5 per cent Neighbourhood Renewal property tax. The Glenora neighbourhood project has a completion date of three years but city officials say once completed, Edmontonians should have a safe place to ride.

"Ultimately we want this to be a very comfortable place for people to ride and keep (cyclists) off the busy roads," said Golly. STEPHANIE DUBOIS/METRO

University of Alberta's anti-cheating message goes viral

The University of Alberta is hoping a new video series will help students stay on the straight and narrow and keep their eyes on their own assignments.

The online series of "quirky" videos launched earlier this year is the institution's latest effort to get students thinking about what constitutes cheating as they head into the second part of the winter semester.

Deborah Eerkes, director of the U of A student judicial affairs, said with a huge turnover of students, the university is always trying to find ways to prevent plagiarism.

As part of the lead up to an all new online academic integrity course, Eerkes said the videos keep the issue of plagiarism and cheating at the front of students' minds.

"It's easy to forget," said

Eerkes. "A lot of students think, 'This doesn't apply to me, it's not something I am planning to do,' but it's a problem because when students need to be thinking about it, they aren't thinking about it."

With three videos already online, U of A student union president Petros Kusmu said the videos helped take the school's message viral.

While plagiarism and cheating are not necessarily a unique problem at the university, Kusmu said the videos have rebranded the topic.

"Talking about academic integrity isn't the most sexy topic," Kusmu said. "When you are able to package it in a way that makes students want to pay attention, I think that's really effective."

Street Performers Festival. Local event celebrates 30 years of 'putting a smile on the face of Edmonton'

STEPHANIE DUBOIS

For the past 30 years, the Edmonton International Street Performers Festival has introduced the city to daring acts and comedians - and this year they plan to do the same.

The event that started with 14 performers has now grown to include 50 and has expanded from Rice Howard Way to Sir

Winston Churchill Square.

'We are the first of its kind in North America, so we really set the parade for other Vaudeville and street performer festivals that have happened in North America," said Shelley Switzer, the festival's artistic producer.

The festival has grown to an event that now accommodates almost 250,000 visitors over the 10-day long event, said Switzer.

The festival doesn't start until July 4, but those wanting a sneak peek can get a glimpse of some of the local acts at this weekend's Vaudeville Madness event, which includes local artists, acrobat Annie Dugan, singer-songwriter Andrea House and Mystery Wonder star Ron Pearson.

Hide-and-seek. RCMP hopes pig carcass will lead to missing bodies

The Saskatchewan RCMP is hoping a bright orange pig carcass will help them locate missing bodies in Saskatchewan's river system.

Equipped with a radio transmitter and GPS tracker, members of the RCMP's major crimes historical case unit (HCU) placed the 180-pound pig into the South Saskatchewan River at the Saskatoon Canoe Club on Wednesday morning.

The whole idea of this project is to track this pig's movements as it flows down the river and hopefully, that will give us some insight as to where bodies end up," said Cpl. Tyler Hadland of the HCU, noting six bodies are presumed to be in the South Saskatchewan River.

"The Saskatoon historical case unit has been annually searching the river, by plane and by boat, for the past number of years and we haven't been able to recover any of these bodies," he said. "So it's quite a mystery."

ela, Tuesday, after their leader, Leopoldo Lopez, surrendered to authorities.

Venezuelan protests carry on, opposition leader still in jail

More protests to come. Plans in the works for nationwide marches on Saturday

Held at a military jail, opposition leader Leopoldo Lopez waited to learn Wednesday if he will be charged for violence that has erupted during protests that have revitalized challenges to 15 years of socialist rule in Venezuela.

Lopez, who dramatically surrendered to authorities before thousands of cheering supporters Tuesday, was to appear before a judge to learn what charges he would face for organizing mass demonstrations that have resulted in at least six deaths and more than 100 injuries over the past week.

The hearing was closed and the outcome had not been announced by late Wednesday as sporadic protests continued to erupt throughout the capital, with protesters setting fires in the streets and police firing volleys of tear gas and blasts from water cannons.

The government of President Nicolas Maduro has accused Lopez, a 42-year-old former mayor and the leader of the Popular Will party, of attempting to foment a coup in the South American nation and authorities had said he could face charges that include homicide and causing grievous

Hundreds of supporters waited outside the courthouse for news of the decision, watched over by National Guard troops.

Caracas Mayor Antonio Ledezma, a member of a different opposition party, showed up at one point in a sign of unity among the foes of the Maduro government.

"We are all united in demanding the release of Leopoldo Lopez," Ledezma said. We are rallying behind him."

The jailing of Lopez has made him a cause célèbre among opponents of Maduro, eclipsing to some degree Henrique Capriles, the opposition's two-time losing presidential candidate.

A week of turmoil

The protests in Venezuela have so far resulted in:

- Six people killed. Two government supporters and four backers of the opposition.
- Renewed calls from human rights groups, calling Lopez's arrest political.

Human rights have condemned the charges against Lopez, with Amnesty International and others saying they appear to be politically motivated.

Ukraine president, protesters call truce

Negotiations.

Earlier violence that killed 26 had fuelled fears the nation could be sliding toward a messy breakup

Ukraine's embattled president and leaders of the protests that have been roiling the country agreed Wednesday on a truce to halt the violence that has killed 26 people and injured more than 425 others.

A protest leader was quoted as saying the government pledged not to attack an opposition encampment in central Kyiv while further negotiations unfold.

President Viktor Yanukovych met with opposition leaders and the two sides agreed to halt the violence and to hold talks on ending bloodshed, a statement on the presidential website said. The statement did not give any further details.

Flames from burning barricades of tires and refuse leapt into the air at the square for a second night, as protesters demanding Yanukovych's resignation showed no sign of yielding.

Tentative reaction

Ukrainians living in the United States and Canada reacted with tentative optimism Wednesday to news of a truce in the violence-torn country, while still shedding tears for their homeland and nervously wondering what will come next.

Yaakov Dov Bleich, who is the chief rabbi of Kyiv and Ukraine, reacted cautiously when interviewed in New York. He noted the enormity of clashes between government forces and protesters Tuesday that left at least 26 people dead.

Ukraine, he said, won't work as a dictatorship. "Certain red lines were crossed yesterday," Bleich said.

"I think it's going to be very hard to rebuild trust between people and the president.

Escaping the death grip

Snake on the loose.

An Alberta man is lucky to be alive after his Burmese python coiled around him

MARCO VIGLIOTTI

Say that one day your beloved pet, whom you had watched sprout since his infancy, managed to break free of his warm, well-ventilated enclosure and began to wriggle his frame around you.

If you had any time to think, you might reflect that although you've been a benevolent caretaker all this time, you're now gasping for air as the ungrateful pet squeezes you ever tighter. Heartbreaking stuff, right?

The pet in question isn't a Labradoodle, and this isn't a story from somewhere in Southeast Asia.

Rather, it's a true tale that snakes on the planet - the feared Burmese python — and

"(The owner) had this rather large dangerous snake he kept in his basement," explained Pat Dunford, an Alberta conservation officer, who did not specify went down there to check on it and because it was loose it started to coil around him.'

Luckily, the man was able to escape — albeit with a new-found and well-deserved fear of the tropical snake. He quickly called conservation officers to help him handle the creature.

The Burmese python is one of the world's five biggest snakes, a collection that also includes the African rock python. The latter is the same species of snake that killed two boys in New Brunswick last summer after escaping from its cage.

Unlike that situation, in which it appears the owner didn't have a permit, the owner in Alberta was able to legally possess the snake thanks to a grandfathering clause in provincial regulations.

"It was during a time in which we were changing regulations and becoming more strict," Dunford explained. "(The owner) got a shelter permit because he possessed it legally before we made our regulations more restrictive, so we grandfathered the possession of certain pets for a time."

"After a day they went in there and because the temperature was much cooler, the snake was so lethargic that it was not aggressive at all."

Pat Dunford, an Alberta conservation officer, describing how officials corralled a loose Burmese python.

Once officers arrived, they developed a game plan to safely apprehend the snake.

As the Burmese python thrives in blisteringly hot conditions, Dunford said, officers decided to turn off the heat in the house in hopes that cooler conditions would slow the snake down.

It worked. "After a day, they went in there and because the temperature was much cooler, the snake was so lethargic that it was not aggressive at all," he explained. "They were able actually to help the owner simply get it back into its secure con-

But this is Canada — could I really meet a pet crocodile on the loose?**

The deaths of two young boys in New Brunswick last summer at the hands of an escaped African rock python alerted the country to the potential dangers of unusual pets.

But is there really

ously frigid Canada of encountering somebody's dangerous exotic animal?

It appears to depend on where you live, but generally, it seems that Canada poses a far bigger threat to odd pets than they do to us.

"Fortunately (in Alberta) we haven't had too many issues with exotics getting into the wild," Pat Dunford, an Alberta conservation officer, told Metro, noting the province does have a detailed action

dle these sorts of situations. as tropical

Well, yes, you could. Because it's happened. In Hamilton, Ont., 2010, a birdwatcher spotted what was either a crocodile or an alligator swimming in a pond. In Kapuskasing, Ont., in 2012, police had to kill a metre-long crocodile

He said dangerous animals imported from sunnier locales, such would probably only survive during the summer months and wouldn't "last long when the temperature gets colder."

Last July, a six-foot, 15-pound albino Burmese python was discovered emaciated and dehydrated in a wooded area near Chilliwack, B.C., according to media reports.

The snake, which was brought to and treated at a Maple Ridge veterinarian clinic, did not fare well in the wild even in the relatively mild climate of the Lower Mainland region of British Columbia.

So one can imagine how poorly an imported snake would fare in significantly colder locales on the Canadian prairies.

In any case, Dunford said, the imported animals that we should worry about more are notoriously invasive species such as certain fish, including the Asian carp. MARCO

Day 2: Exotic pets in Canada

After two New Brunswick boys were killed last year by an escaped African rock python, we wanted to understand why so many Canadians bring exotic — and sometimes lethal - animals into their homes and lives. Sure, they're cute, but in some parts of the U.S., they also seem to be controversial -partly, it appears, because of a debate over whether they spread foot-and-mouth disease. According to online forum hedgehogcentral.com, the animals are illegal in California, Hawaii, Georgia and the five boroughs of New York City. Maine has also had restrictions, and the site describes the situation in Pennsylvania as "all out war on hedgehogs within Hedgehog advocates insist the animals are not a problem. Z.G. Standing Bear, treasurer of the International Hedgehog Association, told Torstar News Service last year that six U.S. states and several cities ban hedgehogs for "all kinds of reasons" based on "no facts at all." "They're benign. There is nothing dangerous about them. That's what irritates us so much; they get this bad reputation," he said.

Hedgehogs may be in for a tough time north of the border, too. Last year, a Toronto city councillor asked municipal staff to study adding animals including hedgehogs to the city's list of prohibited species. Flamingoes, penguins, walruses, vultures and seals are also in his sights. METRO

What happens when it all goes wrong

In the past couple of decades, there've been a number of highprofile cases in Canada of exotic pets killing their owners:

- In 2007, 32-year-old Tanya Dumstrey-Soos was mauled by a tiger owned by her fiancé at a farm in 100 Mile House, B.C., while several children, including one of her own, watched. It's thought that the tiger didn't intentionally attack her, but rather was trying to play with her skirt as she stood outside its enclosure talking to it. The tiger, Gangus, was the only one of three tigers on the farm who wasn't declawed, and Dumstrey-Soos died of her injuries. Animals on the farm also included a lion and a lemur, and a variety of officials and animal welfare advocates said they'd had ongoing concerns about the farm.

The investigating coroner said Neville had visited a friend's house where there was a shedding cat, and it's believed that later, when he put his hand in the python's enclosure, it smelled food and attacked.

• In early 2010, 66-year-old Norman Buwalda was killed at his home in Southwold, Ont., as he entered the cage of a 650-pound Siberian tiger. No one witnessed the attack, and police said they don't know why it happened. Buwalda was the chairman of the Canadian Exotic Animal

She and what had been her pet monkey have made headlines in Canada for more than a year, since the primate managed to get out of her car outside a Toronto Ikea store and scamper around the property

Yasmin Nakhuda, a Toronto lawyer, is trying to get Darwin back through an appeal of an Ontario court ruling that has since kept the monkey at a primate sanctuary.

Metro asked Nakhuda about her case, and about having primates as pets.

Are you optimistic about your chance of reclaiming legal ownership of Darwin through your court appeal? We are still trying to get him back but since the matter is still being reviewed for appeal purposes, I cannot make any further comments re-

Do you feel that monkeys such as Darwin make good pets for people in Canada? Monkeys are not pets for everyone. But if the owner is very dedicated, loving,

Have an adventure with Darwin

Darwin's Ikea shopping trip may be over in real life, but it continues online in the form of a video game which you can find at ikeamonkeyshirt.com. Barnabas Wornoff, an animation professor at Toronto's Seneca College, took about a week to create the game with a group of former students. Players can control the shearling coat-wearing monkey as it wanders through the parking lot in search of Allen keys, pegs and other parts needed to build a Billy wall shelf, all the while dodging roque shopping carts and Ikea customers. They don't see eye to eye on the major irritant between their two countries, but Prime Minister Stephen Harper and U.S. President Barack Obama projected a bit of genuine warmth at the so-called Three Amigos summit on Wednesday.

It may have been the sunny, high-altitude climes in the scenic Spanish colonial corner of Toluca, the hometown of their host, Mexican President Enrique Peña Nieto.

Or it may have been the fact that both Harper and Obama had staked out their positions in advance on the divisive Keystone XL pipeline project: the prime minister wants approval, the president wants to respect the approval process.

During their 30-minute private discussion in Mexico, Obama at least appeared to have politely heard out Harper on the TransCanada project.

The president then had affectionate words for Canadians and for Harper, calling him "Stephen" at one point during his remarks after the two leaders strolled through an enor-

But he added that the fact that Canadian and American men's and women's hockey teams are soon facing off in the ongoing Winter Games could cause him to "not feel as warm toward Canadians until the Olympic matches are over."

Harper echoed Obama's light-hearted tone during his own brief comments.

Olympic officials love to wax eloquent about how sports can help us celebrate humanity as one, as can be illustrated in this history of the Games:

1896: The modern Olympic Games are created to promote world peace.

1897: World peace declared.

This timeline, though exhaustive, is not wholly accurate. In fact, the Olympics solve society's problems with only the same proficiency that pop songs alleviate world hunger.

While I won't claim to know the hearts of the amazing athletes, I can talk about the average sports fans' humanity during these Olympics in Sochi. Their emotions are not always the Olympi-

Rage: Sports always attracts angry fans: hockey fans who would gladly dismember a 14-year-old linesman; baseball fans apoplectic about strike calls they can't possibly see; MMA fans who fill in most of evolution's missing links. It's satisfying in a way. People who mock me for yelling at the TV during a Bruins game positively have a Salchow every four years because someone on Team Canada got "robbed." It's an Olympic tradition. This wouldn't happen if Olympic figure skating had fighting like the North American version, but that's a debate for later.

Fear: What do you suppose is the hardest job in the world? Doctor? Air traffic controller? Olympian? No, the Olympics prove time and again that the hardest job is creating a mascot that is not a horrifying abomination.

It's a life rule. There are no funny clowns, no sexy feet and no mascots that will not haunt your dreams. The Athens mascots appeared to be phalluses wearing coloured condoms, perhaps to laud the birth of civilization. The London mascots were one-eyed demon creatures, probably to promote the city's Olympian level of CCTV cameras.

At first the Sochi bear seemed like a fool-proof idea. Who doesn't like teddy bears? However, the version at the opening ceremonies looked like a drunken uncle who should delete his Internet browsing history more often. Meanwhile, the version that stalks Olympic venues almost looks like an everyday bear mascot -except that he has cold, dead shark eyes. He will have children leaving their night lights on until at least the 2016 Summer Games. And who knows what monstrosity we might be faced with

In short, the Olympics aren't the best of humanity, on either side of the TV screen. They're just ... humanity, which includes braggarts, fools and outright villains, to go along with the kindhearted, the wise and the heroes.

And despite my cynical take, I still believe in heroes. After all, somebody has to slay the damn bear.

Shpeley received an offer he couldn't refuse. As a fresh-faced actor in his last year of theatrical studies, Shpeley was given the lead role in Catalyst Theatre's Nevermore: The Imaginary Life and Mysterious Death of Edgar Allan Poe. It's a role he's held ever since, in addition to his other theatrical credits, including an off-Broadway stint in New York.

He says, "I feel privileged to even pretend to go through what Edgar Allan Poe went through. It's been great to portray my version and Catalyst's version of this character."

The show's success can be attributed to Shpeley's veteran experience as Poe and his exposure to the audience. "I'm on stage for most of the production, so when the story really starts to unfold, the weight of the emotion is there."

Nevermore is an adult musical fairy tale where the audience is pulled between Poe's worlds of fantasy and reality through haunting songs, poetic storytelling and surreal imagery, including mesmerizing costumes. The story daintily explores the events that shaped Poe's career as well as the blurry line between fact and fiction surrounding his death.

"Even though most of the cast and I are from the original production, it's not a remount, it has elements of the first run, but it's a more mature production. We've all had time to process the show, come back and explore it in a new way. I'm excited for the audience to see that."

Apple brings iTunes fest to South by Southwest

Free concert series.

Event that began in London will offer five days of music on this side of the pond iTunes is putting its stamp on South by Southwest, piggybacking on the annual event with its own music festival.

The company said Wednesday it will debut its popular iTunes Festival, a free concert series held in London for the past seven years. While the London version is a 30-day event, the U.S. festival will feature five nights of rock, country, pop and hip hop at South by Southwest, an international showcase for music, film and interactive projects to be held next month in Austin, Texas.

"We're pretty excited about doing this for the first time here in the U.S. at South by Southwest," said top Apple executive Eddy Cue in an interview Tuesday.

"One of the cool things about trying to do the festival is that it's all about the music, the musicians and the fans," Cue said. "You want it in a really close atmosphere where the fans are getting to see these musicians in places they'll never see them again, because they play in much bigger venues.

The iTunes festival will be held March

ACL Live at the Moody Theater, where Austin City Limits is held. The first night will include performances by Coldplay, Imagine Dragons and London Grammar. Coldplay said it was "thrilled" to be playing on opening night, adding: "It's a great honour for our band and we hope everyone has a fantas-

The festival will be streamed live and on-demand through the iTunes store, iTunes radio and on Apple devices.

Cue, Apple's senior vicepresident of Internet software and services, said iTunes had long considered having a U.S. counterpart to its U.K. festival, but had struggled to find the right fit. SXSW turned out to be a natural. "It's got a great vibe for music, and it's centrally located, so timing-wise it works well to broadcast across the U.S.," he said.

While Cue didn't say whether the iTunes Festival at SXSW would become an annual event, he pointed to London as an example of how it could grow. "We'll see where it leads us. I can tell you when we did the London one for the first time, we did it for a week in London and look what it's become.'

Wedding fireworks for Katy and John?

Katy Perry is sending the gossip world into a tizzy by sporting the same diamond ring on a very suspicious finger for the past few days. The first time, we all chalked it up to her being fashionable — but then the singer had the audacity to wear the art-deco-influenced ring yet again at the Elle Style Awards on Tuesday in London. "What does it mmmmeeee-aaaannnn?" your brain is undoubtedly asking, since we are all conditioned to be concerned with this for some reason. We wish we knew — so far both the Perry and John Mayer camps are being mum on the situation. One thing is for sure: The only way she could troll us any harder is if she started wearing a fake baby bump.

Ellen and Portia don't need a ring to prove their love

Ellen DeGeneres is eager to put to rest rumours circulating in some tabloids that her marriage to Portia De Rossi is on the rocks. "The tabloids had a photo of Portia not wearing her wedding ring. She goes, 'I didn't wear it because when I ride horses and I'm holding the reins, it gives me a blister,'" DeGeneres explains to People magazine. "The truth is — and this is corny — I fall more in love with Portia

Shia LaBeouf has been all over the tabloids and the blogs and the Twitter lately. But for those who don't follow celebrity gossip on any medium, Shia has them covered too — they just have to look up into the sky.

LaBeouf has taken to skywriting for the third time, hiring planes to write "#STARTCREATING" in the sky above Los Angeles, according to E! Online. His previous messages were "I am sorry Daniel Clowes" and "#STOPCREATING," both in January.

It's great to have Shia's permission to start making stuff. I hope he follows his own advice, since he's never created anything in particular. LaBoeuf's meltdown/art project/generous subsidy to LA's skywriting industry began in December, when his short film, HowardCantour.

com, was revealed to be a ripoff of a Daniel Clowes comic, Justin M. Damiano. Since then, he's tweeted a slew of plagiarized quotes and apologies, hired the aforementioned skywriters, and last week held an "art installation" in which he sat in a room with a paper bag over his head reading "I am not famous anymore" while weeping — which some would say was a ripoff of Marina Abromović's The Artist is Present.

In case you can't tell, I am heartily sick of this kid — he ripped an artist off, got caught, and he's been trying to reposition his screw-up as art ever since. I would rather see Justin Bieber get an Oscar than hear another word from LaBeouf on the subject.

The runway midway

The fashion industry's finest have flocked to New York and London these past two weeks as part of Fall/Winter 2014 Fashion Month.

Before they pick up their passports and jet away on the Paris and Milan legs of the journey, here's a taste of what Metro's gurus of glam have witnessed from fashion's front lines thus far.

METRO WORLD NEWS

Tommy Hilfiger (NYC)

The first look? Surprise, surprise, it's plaid. An olive parka, check dress and hiking boots opens the lineup of rugged, outdoorsy looks. The vaguely vintage-flavoured duffle coats, shearling jackets, chunky sweaters, Fair Isle knits and fleece dresses have a sporty athleticism to them that imply Tommy's girls do more than sip hot chocolate inside a lodge.

Major trends: Blanket references in the form of dresses, skirts and coats.

What this will mean for your wardrobe: Durable, classic winter wear that really does marry fashion and function.

Marc by Marc Jacobs (NYC)

The autumn/winter'14 girl is all flamboyant sportiness, dressed for a club night in a mix of ninja and BMX gear. Plus all of the sneaker comebacks we've seen in the past year were rendered forgettable thanks to a single shoe in Crayola shades of red and blue that is part raver, part spaceman.

The major trends: Plays on volume — blanket-style wraps, layering and wide leg trousers.

What this will mean for your wardrobe: Judging by my social media feeds, the shoes were the most memorable takeaway from the show. The more "out there' the sneaker the better."

Bora Aksu (London)

After a handful of monochrome skirted looks, colour appears in the form of Barbie pink. Think Lolitameets-Victorian-meets-plastic-fantastic. And get ready to embrace that horrible '90s sequin stretch fabric: it's back, sliced into jackets, waistlines and fishtail pencil skirts. Ponchos and capes are popular up top — only, "floatier" than we've seen them before. Here they're more like mosquito nets. Pretty ones, mind you.

The playlist: Lively flamenco with a Carla Bruni interlude.

The key trends: Pink, ponchos, A-line skirts

Issa (London)

The strength, and what unites this collection, with its varying motifs of stamped flowers, bulbous knits and lattice prints, is the size of it all. Everything is big, from the wafting, blanket-like coats that much of the audience is already wearing to the Balenciaga-esque rounded sleeves on outerwear and tops. My standout piece the wackiest of all the wearable Issa fare — is a zigzag printed monochrome jacket with perfectly curved

The major trends: Ponchos and oversized, rounded coats.

What this will mean for your wardrobe in six months' time: Silhouette is going to factor into your buying purchases more than usual.

Vivienne Westwood (London)

This show was about vintage Vivienne Westwood Red Label. Even the colour palette is true to the brand name, with a tongue-incheek heart-shaped suit. The looks were positively pared-down: a nostalgic retrospective of eras gone by with headscarves, roomy overcoats, and those ubiquitous Westwood cocktail dresses - all very commercially viable with enough of a dash of the Dame's kook.

The scene: Vivienne Westwood's faithful friends.

What this will mean for your wardrobe in six months' time: Granny chic with headscarves and oversized practical coats.

Make a bedroom you want to lie in

Snooze control. Create a cocoon that's perfect for you with designer tips on breaking the usual decorating rules

We're told a well-designed master bedroom should be an oasis of romantic calm. It's also supposed to be the practical place where you store clothing and get a good night's sleep, and it may also be where you watch television, pay bills and even set up a home office.

That's a lot to ask of a single room.

On the bright side, says interior designer Brian Patrick Flynn, you have plenty of decorating freedom. "Since bedrooms are all about self-expression and comforts," he says, "you can break the rules as much as you want."

We've asked Flynn, founder of Flynnside Out Productions, and two other design experts — Betsy Burnham of Burnham Design and Molly Luetkemeyer of M. Design Interiors — for tips on breaking those rules with style to create the ultimate master bedroom.

Only the calmest colours

Forget trendy shades or your favourite bright colours. Burnham advises sticking to a soothing palette of ivory and white, evoking a luxury hotel room. "You can layer colour into that if you want to," she says.

If your idea of peace and quiet involves deeper colours, Flynn suggests navy blues or black-brown tones

And if you really want bolder colour or patterns, Luet-kemeyer recommends using a single pattern throughout your bedroom. This "en suite" look involves using the same fabric for curtains and bedspread, and even covering the walls in the same pattern. "Even a busy pattern won't feel too chaotic if you're consistent" in using it throughout the room, she says.

Big beds in small rooms

Think your medium-size or small bedroom can't handle a gorgeous four-poster bed? Burnham says a bed like that can serve as "a statement piece" that brings lots of style. It actually frees up space, because you won't need any extra decorative pieces of furniture for pizzazz.

Flynn agrees, as long as the bedroom isn't extremely small and the nightstands are in proportion. One of his pet peeves is a large bed flanked by tiny tables, which can make the tables look like they belong in a dollhouse

Soften everything

These designers are seeing a trend toward upholstered beds and headboards, and even upholstery fabric used on walls.

"It's this idea that you're being completely cocooned and buffered from the world," Luetkemeyer says. For some clients, she has also upholstered the inside of armoires or other storage pieces to create a complete sense of soft-

With softness in mind,

Flynn suggests using more than one layer of window treatment: "I usually layer black-out shades with custom, pleated drapery panels," he says. "This softens the hard edges of the room, helps with noise control and also allows the homeowner to sleep in as late as they want."

If you're worried that all that softness will make the room too feminine, Burnham suggests adding just a few sharper, cleaner lines for balance. Choose sleek, mid-century vintage lamps to place on either side of an uphol-stored bed

Banish electronics

It may sound radical, but Luetkemeyer hears from clients now that they're ready to remove the TV and all gadgets from their bedrooms. "People are saying, 'I'm in such overload all day long, and I'm reachable within an inch of myself. I want to have one place where it's really mine."

If you have a desk in your bedroom, consider relocating it. And try plugging in your phone and other gadgets somewhere else in your home at night so you won't be tempted to check them.

Skip nightstands

Flynn suggests using 30-inchtall dressers or chests instead of traditional nightstands: "I'll hit up flea markets and find two different chests with very similar proportions," he says, using these less expensive pieces to flank a more expensive custom headboard or platform bed.

Luetkemeyer agrees that closed storage at bedside is a wise move for most people. It keeps necessities handy, but hides clutter to make your sleeping area look organized even when it isn't.

Pendants and sconces instead of table lamps

Chandeliers are often used in dining rooms and entryways to add glamour and drama. Flynn's tip? They "work just as well in bedrooms."

"I often install pendant lights over nightstands instead of using table lamps," he says, "especially if the headboard is tall and dramatic. Whenever possible, I try to use sculptural pendants which introduce interesting shapes to the room and I always, 100 per cent of the time, install them on dimmers." The associated press

NEUTRAL HUES MAY LURE BUYERS

A fresh coat of paint can work wonders to update the look and feel of your home. That's one reason why taking up the brush and roller is often a recommended upgrade when selling. And when it comes to colour, more often than not, your real estate agent will recommend neutral hues.

"The reason we recommend neutrals is that we want prospective homebuyers to picture themselves living in the home," says Carla Bouchard, a broker with Royal LePage Metro. "A pallet that is too strong may not be to everyone's taste — and yet today's neutrals are giving us many more options beyond the typical beige."

Bouchard points out that neutrals today have a lighter touch with a slight shift toward pastels. These colours are popping up in textiles, countertops and carpets, and can be a great complement to furnishings surroundings and do the heavy lifting should you decide to sell your home.

She recommends the following tactics to choose paint colours to rejuvenate your

Select a shade drawn from prominently displayed artwork, accessory or furnishings. Doing so will ensure that your home is one step closer to "show time" if and when you decide to sell.

Consider adjacent rooms. Think about how your chosen colour will interact with adjacent rooms. Strive for complimentary hues from a colour wheel to provide natural flow from room to room.

Consider what time of day the room will be most often used. While you may be tempted to paint a basement room a bright sunny yellow, if the room is to be used most often in the evening, hues of blue, green or grey may be more appropriate.

Bring home a paint sample or oversized paint chip. Make an informed choice and consider how it looks in your room, and under various lighting conditions, before you commit. News Canada

Humph Day in Sochi

Women's bobsled.

Canadian duo successfully defends its title won in Vancouver

Kaillie Humphries arrived at the start house for her final bobsled run at the Sochi Games not knowing how much time she needed to make up to catch the leaders.

Her brakeman, Heather Moyse, knew but wasn't saying. She wanted her pilot to worry about her own run and not the clock.

"I just looked at her and I said, 'It's possible,'" Moyse said. "That's all Kaillie needed to know, that the gap wasn't closed but it was possible."

Humphries visualized the 17-turn track in her mind and set out to nail another consistent run. She delivered just that Wednesday night and it was enough to give them a second straight women's Olympic bobsled title, the first duo to achieve that goal.

"When I don't know times, I mean, ignorance is bliss," Humphries said.

The Canada 1 sled had a gap of 11-100ths of a second to close entering the final run. Moyse delivered with a strong push at the start, then Humphries took over from there.

Both were elated at the finish and satisfied knowing they did everything they could.

"For both of us to know we pushed the hardest we could have possibly pushed, I drove the track the very best that I knew how, when we got out of the sled on that fourth run both her and I—without even having to really say anything—knew that we had done everything in our power," Humphries said.

With at least a silver locked up, they had a nervous two-minute wait in the finish area as Elana Meyers and Lauryn Williams completed their final run.

"I never wish bad on people but I was thinking, 'Just make a few mistakes, please,'" Humphries said.

Humphries, from Calgary, and Moyse, from Summerside, P.E.I., finished with a four-run time of three minutes 50.61 seconds. Meyers and Williams were second in 3:50.71.

The United States also won bronze, with Jamie Greubel and Aja Evans finishing a full second off the lead in 3:51.61. Edmonton's Jenny Ciochetti and Chelsea Valois of Zenon Park, Sask., were 13th in the Canada 2 sled in 3:54.49.

Jones pushing for Olympic clean sweep

Jennifer Jones jumped for joy, her arms and broom triumphantly in the air. And why not?

The Winnipeg skip, wearing gold eye shadow, swept into the Olympic gold-medal curling game with a string of late, big-money shots Wednesday to edge Britain 6-4 and improve her record at the Ice Cube Curling Center to 10-0.

Jones, third Kaitlyn Lawes, second Jill Officer and lead Dawn McEwen stepped up when it mattered to dispose of 2013 world champion Eve Muirhead in an edge-of-yourseat Olympic semifinal.

"I'm so proud of us," Jones said. "I thought we came out and played lights out today."

Now only Sweden's Margaretha Sigfridsson stands in the way of the Jones juggernaut.

"It's crazy to think that we're going to be on that podium, I'm not going to lie," said a smiling Jones, who clapped her hands in celebration as she arrived to talk to reporters.

Canada also has a chance of winning gold in men's curling.

Brad Jacobs' team advanced to the men's championship game with a 10-6 win over China's Rui Liu in the semifinals Wednesday.

Britain's David Murdoch awaits in Friday's final.

Lightning prospect stands on his head in front of future GM as Latvians almost slav Goliath in Sochi

As Kristers Gudlevskis turned aside shot after shot, Sidney Crosby and his teammates wondered what it would take to beat the Latvian goaltender.

Besides picking the puck up and throwing it in the net, what could you tell someone to do in those situations?" Crosby said.

Team Canada didn't quite have to resort to that, surviving a historic upset bid by Latvia with a 2-1 win in the quarter-finals of the Olympics on the strength of a late powerplay goal by Shea Weber.

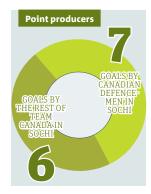

Despite Gudlevskis making 55 saves on 57 shots, coach Mike Babcock didn't sense any uneasiness on his bench. It's his hope that being in a tight, frustrating game will help Canada as it advances to face the rival Americans in the semifinals Friday.

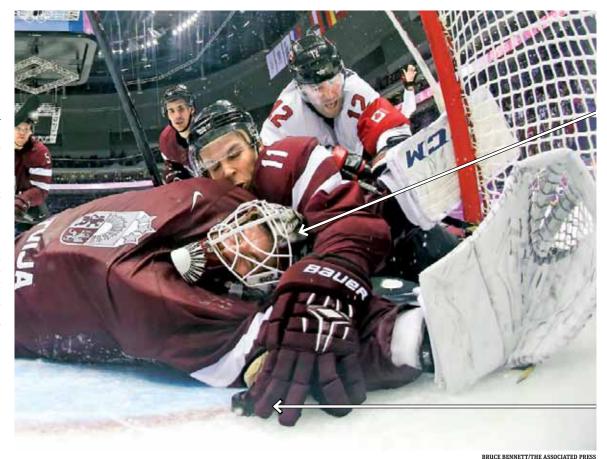

"We just thought if we kept doing it, we'd get our chances, we'd get a break, we'd score a goal," Babcock said. "Did I want to win 7-1? Absolutely. Do I think it's better for my team that we won the way we did? For sure."

The next one looks tougher on paper than any of Canada's first four games in Sochi. At first glance, a matchup against 11th-seeded Latvia didn't seem like it would be much of a test for the gold-medal favourites.

Canada, Babcock insisted, did not take Latvia lightly. Watching coach Ted Nolan's group eliminate Switzerland should have been enough of a wake-up call.

Still, it was hard to expect this. After Patrick Sharp gave Canada a lead at the 13:37 mark of the first period, it looked like Gudlevskis wouldn't get beat again and the frustration crept in.

"It can get to you, I think, a little bit," winger Patrick Marleau said. "But you just got to keep persisting and think that next one's going to go in."

It didn't help that most of the game elapsed with a tie score after Lauris Darzins got a breakaway and beat Carey Price two minutes after Sharp's goal. And it didn't help that Canada played almost two full periods without John Tavares, who was hit by Arturs Kulda and is out for the rest of the tournament with a knee

A controversial no-goal call in the third period that could have led to a Canadian penalty shot only added to the drama.

All the while, Canada had Gudlevskis and the Latvians under siege but couldn't break through. It's one thing to squeeze the sticks a little too tight, but another one altogether to have a goalie looking like a brick wall.

"Coming into this tournament we talked about facing adversity," defenceman Duncan Keith said. "There was a little bit there throughout this game. We didn't want to get frustrated with the score being

'We just thought we were going to win," he said. "We just talked about being patient and staying the course, not getting in a hurry, not forcing anything. If we did that we thought we'd be fine, and in the end we were."

It looked like Canada took the lead 8:27 into the third, but a controversial call kept it 1-1. Jonathan Toews and Patrick Marleau got the puck to the goal-line and almost over, but Latvia defenceman Kristaps Sotnieks gloved it to keep it out.

The ruling was that the puck did not fully cross the line, and Canada did not get a penalty shot because that cannot be awarded on review.

Finn-ished

'You never know'

After Russia's men's hockey loss in the quarter-finals to Finland, most of Russia's players rushed through a mixed zone with TV cameras and reporters without stopping, waving off requests to verbalize their disappointment in losing their medal chances in the Sochi Games.

The players who did stop were brief. And Finland, not surprisingly, had a little more to say, with many sentiments summed up by forward Teemu Selanne:

"The experts are wrong many times — and I love it."

Still, as happy as the Finns were, they did show some sympathy for a Russian team that was carrying such high expectations.

Selanne: "I'm a little bit sad also for them. Obviously, they had a big dream to win the gold medal here and then it doesn't work so it's kind of disappointing in many ways because that would be a great story. But again, it's proving to the hockey world that you never know.

Russia's Alex Ovechkin only had this to say: "No emotion right now."

Canada's dozen forwards have a combined 18 previous appearances at the Winter Olympics among them compared to seven among the American forwards.

On defence, previous Winter Games experience is equal between the two countries. Both sides possess seasoned goaltenders.

Thursday's final at the Bolshoy Ice Dome is about executing in a vice of pressure for both countries.

A quick look at the players in the women's hockey final between Canada and the U.S.:

- Marie-Philip Poulin. Scored both of Canada's goals in the 2010 final.
- Hayley Wickenheiser. Sixtime Olympian proving in this tournament she hasn't Catherine Ward. Canada needs her poise and puck skills on an inexperienced defence.

- Jessie Vetter. The U.S. has beaten Canada in four of the last five world championship finals with Vetter the gold it won in 1998 and this year's team is young and relentless.

If there is a crack in their armour, it was revealed in Canada's 3-2 victory in the preliminary round. Taking a 1-0 lead into the third period, the Americans lost their composure when Canada equalized early in the second and pulled ahead less than two minutes later.

So it will be up to three-time

Bjoerndalen sets new winter medal mark with 13

In a fitting way to mark becoming the most decorated Winter Olympian ever, Ole Einar Bjoerndalen ensured his record 13th medal was gold Wednesday when he helped Norway win the first Olympic mixed relay in biathlon.

Bjoerndalen broke the total medals record he previously shared with retired cross-country skiing great Bjoern Daehlie, and also matched the fellow Norwegian's mark of eight golds. Bjoerndalen won gold earlier at the Sochi Olympics in the men's sprint biathlon.

Daehlie won eight gold, four silver and no bronze medals; Bjoerndalen's haul is now 8-4-1.

The 40-year-old Bjoerndalen can win another medal in the last men's biathlon event in Sochi, the 4x7.5K relay on Saturday.

Norway's victory came one day after Bjoerndalen missed out on a medal chance in the 15K mass start event, when he was in fourth position before missing four targets in his final shooting. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NHL. Rested Oilers look to pick up where they left off before Olympic break

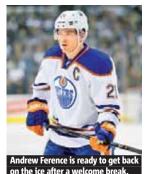

The Edmonton Oilers returned to the ice Wednesday after 12 days off for the Olympic break, several of them with red faces either from sun tanning or the hard bike riding that was part of the mini training camp/conditioning session they were put through.

"It feels a lot shorter than it was," said veteran defenceman Andrew Ference, who spent part of the break with his family in Canmore, Alta., visiting former Olympians Thomas Grandi and Sara Renner. "But it's a really good chance to get rid of all the little aches and pains."

Ference said it has to be remembered that with back-toback condensed seasons — last year because of the lockout players need the break both mentally and physically.

"The last calendar year I think I played 110 or 120 games, so it's a much welcomed break."

It was a break that came with the Oilers suddenly having found their game in the midst of another disastrous, non-playoff season. They went into the Olympic break having won five of their previous seven games - one of the losses was in overtime — and outscoring their opponents 18-12.

HARRY HOW/GETTY IMAGES FILE

Their previous 10 games before the break showed them at 5-3-2, a record that put them in the middle of the pack, unlike the 29th place they are in with their overall record of 20-33-7.

"It is tough from that aspect," forward Jordan Eberle said of the untimely break. "Some of the GMs around the league have been complaining, some of the teams were going well and then you get this break. It's almost like a new season starting."
